DEATH OF MR. D. L. APHART.

The death of Mr. D. L. Aphart, occurred yesterday afternoon at his residence on Smith's lane. The deceased was a young man, and had for a long time occupied the position of interpreter in the Courts; speaking English, Hawaiian and Chinese fluently. At the time of his death he was a member and ex-foreman of China Engine Co. No. 5, and will be buried under the auspices of the Honolulu Fire Department this afternoon.

FUNERAL OF MISS MORLEY.

The funeral of the late Miss F. G. Morley, music teacher at the Kawaiahae Seminary, took place from the Kawaiahae Church yesterday afternoon, the Revs. Dr. Beckwith of the Central Union Church, and H. H. Parker of Kawaiahae Church officiating. The church was most beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and growing plants, the work of loving hands, friends of the deceased. The service in English and Hawaiian was very impressive. The remains have been deposited in the family vault of Mrs. Haelele, to await the action of the relatives who reside in Wisconsin.

FIRE AT WAIKIKI.

The residence of Mr. Gorham at Waikiki was entirely destroyed by fire last evening. Report says that the fire originated in the kitchen. Mr. Gorham was in the yard attending to his horse when he discovered the house on fire. He went immediately into the house and tried to extinguish it; but all his efforts were in vain. The fire increased so rapidly and became so intensely hot, that everything in the house had to be abandoned to the flames, the family only saving one trunk.

Mr. H. J. Nolte, a neighbor, kindly offered the sufferers the use of his cottage, which they very kindly declined, preferring to go into town.

FIRE AT PALAMA.

At 1 P. M. a telephone message was received at this office that the house of Antonio Rickards at Palama was on fire. No alarm was sounded on account of the remoteness of the fire from the city, and the impossibility of the Fire Department getting there in time to save anything. A few minutes later another message was received stating that another house, separated from the one first on fire by a small creek, had caught fire, and that the authorities had been requested to de-patch a steam fire engine, to stop if possible its further progress.

Later—a still alarm was sent into First Assistant Engineer, Mr. Frank Hustace, who with Mr. Jas. F. Morgan, Second Assistant Engineer, and members of Engine Co. No. 2, went out with the engine, drawn by a span of horses from the Fashion Stables.

The engine stopped half-way between the bridge, just beyond the Reformatory School, and the What Cheer House.

There was no necessity of the engine going any further. The roof of a native house had been on fire, but a squad of natives and others had succeeded in putting it out.

All the baggage and furniture of the burning house had been taken out and the blaze was under control when the firemen arrived there.

DISTRIBUTION IN ENGLAND.

I write from a large and populous rural parish, in which from special causes, into which I need not now enter, the prevailing depression is felt with peculiar severity.

There are around me many farm laborers, decent, steady men, able and willing to do a good day's work, who during this long winter have had no work to do, and would have starved unless I aided by a few generous friends, had been often able to help them to have a bit of fire in their grate and a loaf of bread on their table.

The general wage for the few men whom the farmers are able to employ is 9s the week, deduction from this being made for the days (very frequent, alas!) and portions of days during which work cannot be done on this wet, clay soil. Two strong youths, aged eighteen, whom I am just helping to emigrate, have been earning, one, 5s per week and the other 4s 6d, deductions from these sums being also made for all time lost through the badness of weather. As the mother of one of these lads said to me of his earnings, "It is not enough to find him in food, let alone clothes."

A large proportion of these people are already deeply in debt to the little tradesmen of the place, and are sinking fast into utter despair. In many a village the parson, himself generally with sadly diminished means, is laboring wearily to assist the most grievous cases among his still poorer neighbors. Yours, obediently, JAMES A. BOSSER.

WESTERN WOMEN IN OFFICE.

The first appearance of the Okla-homa Council presented a very unique appearance. It was called for the Monday afternoon succeeding the election, but when the first member of that august body arrived she found the rooms where such meetings were held in a horrible condition. There was actually tobacco spit on the floor and the corners of the room had never been swept out. The first thing done was to order the Town Marshal to employ women to scrub the place and remove all the cuspidors. Then signs were hung on the walls prohibiting the use of tobacco in any form. The room was fit to sit in, but there was an evident uneasiness in the minds of the stateswomen on account of the absence of tidies on the backs of the benches around the room. With the taboo placed on the use of the tobacco, the men who have made the council chamber their loafing place have been compelled to seek new quarters, and as there are no saloons in Kansas, the corner stores have become places of general resort, but even here the old-time stories are told with bated breath, while the boisterous mirth which formerly marked the congregation of the Kansas villagers has become hushed.

Syracuse, Kan., last year had a woman Council. This spring not a woman was nominated for office in that town. [Kansas Letter to N. Y. Herald.]

A NEW SADDLE.

Captain Peat, who was formerly an officer in Her Majesty's 87th Regiment, and who subsequently served with great distinction as colonel of cavalry in the war between the Northern and Southern States of America, has just taken out a patent for a saddle which is already seriously engaging the attention of our War Office authorities.

The framework is somewhat similar to that of the McClellan saddle, now in use in the United States Army. One of its great advantages is that it enables the rider to obtain a closer grip on his charger than it is possible for a man who has to straddle bulging flaps. Its chief merit, however, consists in the impossibility of its shifting, or slipping round. This danger, which is often encountered both in the mounted service and the hunting field, is entirely avoided by means of girths. A strap is fixed to the fore and another to the rear portion of the saddle on both sides, to which is attached the main girth, which, passing under the belly of the horse, is buckled up on the near side. It therefore follows, that the strain being equal on both sides, it is held fast in the position it is placed on the horse's back. The buckling up process is also very simple, as there is no raising of flaps or tugging away at the girths while the head of the rider is pressed against the lower portion of the saddle, and employed in holding up the flaps. With regard to the saddle itself, it is well known that throughout all the wonderful raids made by Sheridan around Richmond and in the Shenandoah Valley sore backs were unknown; and it seems admirably adapted for hot climates, as, being only framework, it gives plenty of ventilation for both horse and rider.

It has already been inspected by several cavalry officers, and the War Office authorities have appointed a board of inquiry to report on its merits. A very favorable opinion of Captain Peat's method of girthing has already been expressed, and several distinguished officers hold both the saddle and its appliances suited for our new corps of mounted infantry. It has recently undergone several trials at Aldershot, where there appears to be but one opinion as to its many advantages. —[Home News.]

A REMARKABLE CASE.

Under the above heading the Doncaster Reporter of July 6th, 1887, publishes the following in its editorial columns—

Our readers may recall the circumstance of a young clerk, named Arthur Richold, falling insensible on the Wentley Lane in this town some time ago, and being picked up, as he continued perfectly helpless, and taken in a cab by two gentlemen to the office of F. W. Fisher, Esq; the solicitor who employed him. On restoring him to consciousness it was ascertained that he was afflicted with what seemed to be an incurable disease. When he was able to speak he said he had been to his dinner and was on his way back to his work, when suddenly his head was in a whirl and he fell in the street like a man who is knocked down. On coming to his senses in the solicitor's office he thought what this might mean, and feared he was going to have a fit of illness, which we all know is a very dreadful thing for a poor man with a family to care for.

With this in his mind he at once sought the best medical advice, telling the doctors how he had been attacked. They questioned him, and found that his present malady was exhaustion of the nervous system resulting from general debility, indigestion, and dyspepsia of a chronic nature. This in turn had been caused by confinement to his desk and grief at the loss of dear friends by death. The coming on of this strange disease, as described by Mr. Richold, must be of interest both to sick and well. He had noticed for several years previously, in fact, that his eyes and face began to have a yellow look; there was a sticky and unpleasant slime on the gums and teeth in the morning; the tongue coated; and the bowels so bound and costive that it induced that most painful and troublesome ailment—the piles. He says there was some pain in the sides and back and a sense of fullness on the right side, as though the liver were enlarging, which proved to be the terrible fact. The secretions from the kidneys would be scanty and high-colored, with a kind of gritty or sandy deposit after standing.

These things had troubled Mr. Richold a long time, and after his fall in the street he clearly perceived that the fit of giddiness was nothing more than a sign of the steadily and deadly advance of the complaint, which began in digestion and dyspepsia. His story of how he went from one physician to another in search of a cure that his wife and little ones might not come to want is very pathetic and touching. Finally he became too ill to keep his situation and had to give it up. This was a sad calamity. He was appalled to think how he should be able to live. But God raised up friends who helped to keep the wolf from the door. He then went to the seaside at Walton-on-the-Naze, but neither the change, nor the physicians who treated him there, did any good. All being without avail he visited London, with a sort of vague hope that some advantage might happen to him in the metropolis. This was in October, 1885.

How wonderful, indeed, are the ways of Providence, which dashes down our highest hopes and then helps us when we least expect it.

While in London he stated his condition to a friend, who strongly advised him to try a medicine which he called Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, saying it was genuine and honest, and often cured when everything else had failed. He bought a bottle of a chemist in Piccadilly, and began using it according to the directions. He did this without faith or hope, and the public may there fore judge of his surprise and pleasure when after taking a few doses he felt great relief. He could eat better; his food distressed him less; the symptoms we have named abated; the dark spots which had floated before his eyes like smuts of soot, gradually disappeared, and his strength increased. Before this time his knees would knock together whenever he tried to walk. So encouraged was he now that he kept on using Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup until it ended in completely curing him.

In speaking of his wonderful recovery Mr. Richold says it made him think of poor Robinson Crusoe, and his deliverance from captivity on his island in the sea; and added, "But for Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup the grass would now be growing over my grave."

Our readers can rest assured of the strict truth of all the statements in this most remarkable case, as Mr. Richold (now residing at Swiss Cottage, Walton-on-the-Naze) belongs to one of the oldest and most respected families in the beautiful village of Long Melford, Suffolk, and his personal character is attested by so high an authority as the Rev. C. J. Martyn, rector of that parish, besides other excellent names. We have deemed the case of such importance to the public as to justify us in giving this short account of it in our columns.
