

TRYING TO GET EVIDENCE BACK

INQUEST TO BE CONTINUED TODAY

(From Thursday's Advertiser.)

Conflicting testimony and statements bordering on the sensational were the features of the inquest which was held last night to determine, if possible, the cause of the death of Henry Wetherill, the sailor from the American-Hawaiian steamer Pleiades who was found with his skull crushed in on the waterfront last Tuesday morning. On account of the tedious manner in which it was necessary to take the testimony of several of the witnesses, interpreters having to be used, the examination of all the witnesses was not concluded last evening, though the inquest was continued until after ten o'clock.

"Mary said her full brother was going to be hanged." This is one of the sensational developments, a statement made by Mrs. Jorgenson, a Hawaiian woman. She referred to what Mary McCandless had said to her yesterday regarding Jim McCandless, her brother who is now under arrest. Deputy City Attorney Milverton had a great deal of trouble in getting direct statements from some of the witnesses, and he encountered considerable difficulty when he attempted to secure information from Mrs. Jorgenson. She contradicted herself several times, giving the excuse afterwards that she had spoken too quickly in the first place and that she had not meant what she said. All of the evidence, however, seems to show that Wetherill was last alive in the company of Jim McCandless and Thomas Cummings, the two who were on the Pleiades with him.

Early Monday evening, according to the testimony of several of the witnesses, McCandless, Cummings and Wetherill called at the place on Liliha and King streets where Mary McCandless has her abode. Here, for a while, a "general good time" was had. There was music and there was gin, and everybody was happy. But two of the men had a row about something on board the ship, at least, according to one of the Hawaiian women who was on the stand they were talking about ships when they quarreled, and the pleasant little party was broken up.

In the meantime, however, Mary McCandless had enquired of her brother whether or not he intended giving her any money. To this he replied that he had none at all. Downstairs from the room the party then went and a spirited discussion of some kind was held.

W. Spelser, watchman for the O. R. & L. Company, was called early in the evening as a witness, he testifying that about midnight Monday he and Jack Doyle, train dispatcher, started to walk towards the latter's cottage. They passed a couple of men on the way. The men were arguing about something, the exact meaning of which Spelser and Doyle did not catch. One of the men said "You are a fool to go back on the ship."

Jack Doyle's testimony was practically the same as that of Spelser. He said that it was too dark for him to identify the men. Joseph Whaley, watchman on the dredger "Pearl," lying between the Hackfeld wharf and the Railroad No. 1 wharf, testified that he saw three men walking towards the Pleiades, or on the road that led in the ship's direction, shortly after ten-thirty Monday night. He said that they were apparently under the influence of liquor, one of them more than the others, for he was in the middle and the two with him were trying to drag him along the road. Whaley heard them say something in Hawaiian about going back to town, and finally they turned mauka. Just then, according to Whaley, mounted policemen came along on their horses, and his attention was distracted from the men.

Jennie Kekaua, who was present at the "good time," was called as a witness, and she named those who were present in the room. She stated that she went to bed early, but could not sleep because of the noise made by Mary McCandless and her brother Jim. The latter was not called on the stand last night on account of the lateness of the hour.

Herman Meek, mounted police officer, testified that he saw Thomas Cummings and Jim McCandless, accompanied by a third man, about eleven o'clock Monday evening. Meek had been acquainted with Cummings and McCandless, and he expressed surprise at the time to the officer who was with him that they should be there, as he had not seen them for a long time.

The inquest will be continued today, McCandless and several others being yet to give their testimony.

MOVEMENTS OF JAPANESE.

Chronicle.—The acting consul general of Japan, K. Yamasaki, has given out some figures relative to the immigration and emigration of Japanese to and from this country. The figures are official, being the published report of the department of foreign affairs of Japan, which has just been cabled to the consul general's office. They show that 25 first cabin, 36 second cabin and 133 steerage passengers came to the United States, exclusive of Hawaii, in April, while in the same time 25 first class, 17 second class and 210 steerage passengers left this country for Japan.

The travel to Hawaii consisted of 3 first cabin, no second cabin and 72 steerage passengers in the same time, while 1 first class, no second class and 268 steerage passengers returned to Japan from Hawaii.

"It is apparent," says the consul general, "that during this period 59 more Japanese returned home than entered the mainland of the United States, and 194 more returned from than entered Hawaii. The largest proportion of these were of the working class, as shown by their mode of travel."

DIES ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Siberia In and Out.

Heavily freighted and carrying a full list of passengers, the Pacific Mail liner Siberia, Captain Zeeder, arrived here yesterday morning early from San Francisco. The Siberia had a large number of local people on board, and also carried a small shipment of freight for Honolulu. Her through freight amounted to about 3000 tons. Among the freight for this port were 1500 boxes of oranges. The big liner sailed on her voyage to the Orient at four o'clock in the afternoon.

YOU WILL NOT be deceived. That there are cheats and frauds in plenty everybody knows; but it is seldom or never that any large business house is guilty of them, no matter what line of trade it follows. There can be no permanent success of any kind based on dishonesty or deception. There never was, and never will be. The men who try that are simply fools and soon come to grief, as they deserve.

Now many persons are, nevertheless, afraid to buy certain advertised articles lest they be humbugged and deluded; especially are they slow to place confidence in published statements of the merits of medicines. The effective modern remedy known as WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION is as safe and genuine an article to purchase as flour, silk or cotton goods from the mills of manufacturers with a world-wide reputation. We could not afford to exaggerate its qualities or misrepresent it in the least; and it is not necessary. It is palatable as honey and contains all the curative properties of pure Cod Liver Oil, extracted by us from fresh cod livers, combined with the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites and the Extracts of Malt and Wild Cherry; and how valuable such a blending of these important medicinal agents must be plain to everybody. It is beyond price in Debility, Lung Troubles and Blood Impurities. Science can furnish nothing better—perhaps nothing so good. Dr. W. H. Dalfé, of Canada, says: "I have used it in my practice and take pleasure in recommending it as a valuable tonic and reconstructive." It is a remedy that can afford to appeal to its record and represents the science and knowledge of bright and aggressive medical investigation. "One bottle convinces." At chemists.
