RUDOLPH NEUMANN DEAD.

The Popular General Agent of the Alaska Commercial Company Falls Down a Shaft.

The steamer Portland which arrived in San Francisco on October 30th, had on board the remains of the late Rudolph Neumann. The deceased was one of the best known and best liked men in Alaska.

"Mr. Neumann's death was a very tragic one," said J. Homer Fritch, the well-known coal man, who was a passenger by the Portland from St. Michael. "He was the general agent for the company throughout Alaska, and after settling up his business for the year at Unalaska went over to Unga on the schooner Pearl to wind up affairs there. In company with T. C. Mayon, superintendent of the Apollo mine, he was going over the company's property.

"A new vein had been struck in the Sitka mine and Mayon and Neumann were going down the shaft to inspect it. At the 100 foot level both men got out of the bucket and were standing on a platform, Mr. Neumann holding on to one of the uprights. Mr. Neumann made some remark about the darkness, and Mr. Mayon asked him, 'Can you see?' 'Yes, I'm all right,' was the answer, but the next instant he got dizzy and went crashing to the bottom of the shaft 209 feet below. How Superintendent Mayon got out of the mine he does not know, but he succeeded somehow and sent a party of miners down after the body. It was brought to the surface and embalmed by the doctor on the island and sent to San Francisco for interment.

The Indians were broken-hearted over the death of Mr. Neumann. He was like a father to them, and they were still weeping for him when we left the island."

Leopold Neumann, the well-known dentist, was a brother of the deceased, and Paul Neumann, Attorney-General of Hawaii under the monarchy, was his uncle. The Messrs. Sloss, Neumann and a host of the deceased's friends were down at the wharf to meet him, only to be confronted by the Portland with her flag at half mast.

Rudolph Neumann first went to Alaska in 1873 in the schooner Eustace with Captain Blair. He became the Alaska Commercial Company's agent at St. Michael in that year, but when Alfred Greenbaum retired he became general agent for the concern with headquarters at Unalaska.

Pro Bono Publico.

It is a sad fact, but it is nevertheless a fact, that people will drink whiskey. The prohibitionists try always to kick against a prick, while the true philanthropists endeavor to furnish a grade of whiskeys, which can be beneficial only to the consumers.

Lovejoy & Co., the well-known wholesale liquor dealers on Nuuanu street, have placed on the market the celebrated whiskey, which is manufactured and bottled by the Jesse Moore, Hunt Company of San Francisco, and Louisville.

This whiskey has been bottled specially for medicinal purposes, and Lovejoy & Co. are handling it in the interest of public health.

The flavor of the Jesse Moore Whiskey is unexcelled and will tickle the palate of every connoisseur of "straight goods."

Several cases of the "Ambrosial" stuff were ordered by the Tennessee soldiers, who know good whiskey when they taste it.

We think that our endorsement of the quality of the whiskey ought to be sufficient, but those who doubt it can judge for themselves by stepping into the store of Lovejoy & Co. on Nuuanu street and whisper, A. A.

The new "Victoria" postal scale is a great improvement on the old method of weighing letters and parcels. There are no calculations or references to postage rates to make, as the machine indicates both the weight of the letter or parcel and the postage which it requires. Another great advantage of the machine is that there are no weights to lie about and get lost.

Joseph Chamberlain, in his now famous speech at Birmingham, said he would prefer the judgment of the people to that of the diplomats.

In the long run the majority will be found to be right—this is proven by the success of our Republic.

The people may not be easily imposed upon and the wise merchant knows it.

Many Kamaainas travel considerably and learn from observation what other countries produce, and know what's what

When we offer an article for sale and call it something we're quite sure there's no false label on it; quite sure, indeed, that it is just what we call it or we wouldn't expect to hold our position in the trade very long.

We haven't labored steadily well on toward the one-fourth century mark to reach the top in our line of business just to fool away that good name we prize so much on a game of chance like misrepresenting an article of food.
